International Conference
Managing Alpine Future II

“Inspire and drive sustainable mountain regions”

21-23 November 2011
Innsbruck, Austria

Focus

“Managing Alpine Future II” will for the second time, after 2007 send out important impulses for sustainable adaptation strategies in highly sensitive human-environment systems in mountain regions.

During the three-day event, inter- and transdisciplinary aspects of current and future potential impacts of climate change and their repercussions on ecological, demographic, socio-economic and cultural processes in mountain regions will be discussed.

Participants

“Managing Alpine Future II” targets stakeholders from academia, governments, non-governmental organisations, international organisations and the private sector in order to maximise cross-fertilisation in the field of mountain research and development.

More than 130 oral and poster presentations from the world over have been accepted and a number of internationally renowned plenary and keynote speakers will additionally enrich the conference.

We expect up to 400 international visitors throughout the conference.

Programme Overview

Next to hosting a number of plenary talks and a public event, “Managing Alpine Future II” will feature the following seven core themes in both oral and poster sessions:

- Climate Change: from paleo-climate to climate modelling
- Natural Resources and Ecology: from alpine meadows to ecosystem services
- Tourism and Energy: from mobility to snow-making
- Society and Culture: from education to migration
- Ethics and Politics: from consumer behaviour to multi-level governance
- Spatial Planning: from hazard zoning to land use changes
- Hydrology: from flood retention to integrated water resource management
